JUL 20 1922 The chapter opens with Dariel Bainbridge and Margie Dailey grieving, over the fact that Hutch had perished beneath the ice of the river-- which they overheard Lennox telling Fay Vallon. They also learned that the Man from Java had arrived in New York, something which would mean much to Hutch McClelland. Both were startled when Hutch suddenly appeared. After he had finished telling of his miraculous escape, Dariel informed him of the arrival of the Man from Java. Hutch decided that he must hurry to the steamship dock and find the mysterious arrival before Lennox could confront him.

On board the S.S. Fort McClelland, the Man from Java was entertaining newspaper men, showing them curios he had collected. Among them was the "Guardian of the Temple", also known as the "Cabinet of Death". The affair was a handsomely carved cabinet, that, when opened extended blade-like arms which embraced any object that opened the door. After the reporters departed, Lennox put in his appearance, and, showing his credentials demanded the shipping plans which were in the possession of the Man from Java. He was about to receive the papers when Hutch arrived, and a heated argument followed. Hutch decided to get the papers from Lennox by force. This resulted in a struggle, Lennox throwing the papers in the "Cabinet of Death". When Hutch opened the door to secure them, he was seized in the grasp of the sharp blades and drawn into the cabinet.
